There is a very practical way to determine if someone is about to take their driving test. It's all about the "flipping of the license", or the "curl" of the license. The "curl" is simply the movement of the license as someone is about to take their driving test. "Curling" your license is a sign that you are about to take your driving test. The test is administered in two parts. The first is the question and answer type of part of the test. The applicant is required to answer fifty multiple-choice and essay questions which are all in a common format. The second part of the test is a road test in which the applicant is required to complete a highway driving section. This section is made up of 16 road test questions, all of which have a different theme. The goal is to test the applicant's knowledge and test-taking skills. All of the road test questions are general multiple choice questions. The applicant is required to correctly answer at least 12 of the 16 questions to pass the road test. The application consists of information regarding the test. It includes, but is not limited to: The application fee, The issue date of the driving license and registration.
