Photograph: Alamy Statistic Newspapers will increase weekly price of blood and blood products by 10% over next month, despite NHS urging that parents should be buying from specialist centres Susan Taylor Fri 1 Nov 2017 18.44 GMT Share on Facebook Share on Twitter Share via Email The price of blood and blood products is to rise by 10% from January 1 next year, in a move that has been blamed on rising costs. The extra cost - of about £120 per week per unit of blood - is due to a range of factors, including costs for the biobanking component of the service, the British Blood Transfusion Society (BBTS) said. "Despite the efforts of the National Blood Transfusion Council to reduce costs and increase the number of products available, patient access to blood products is limited and this has resulted in a small increase in the cost of buying from some distributors," said BBTS chief executive, John Rodgers. "The price of blood and blood products is now only slightly lower than it was in early 2012, with specialist hospitals buying products directly from the NHS and the NHS paying a mark-up to wholesalers." The organisation for patients and health care staff said it was disappointed by the additional price increases. NHS England says that regular infusions were going up for the first time in three years due to high levels of demand for red blood cell transfusions. Transfusion services have been under pressure since the NHS was told in 2015 that it needed to find £425m a year to fund a shortfall in the supply of blood products, caused by falling birth rates and a falling number of donors. Despite spending £30m a year on the campaign to encourage more donations, donor numbers dropped in 2015 to 1.7 million, a fall of 0.8 million from three years earlier. Last year more than 1.57 million donations were made, a drop of 0.24 million. The NHS Blood and Transplant service manages the collection and storage of blood and blood

Advances in post polio vaccine production have been rapid. Because of their chronicity, the population at risk of post polio sequelae should be followed for over 20 years. Post polio vaccine testing has not advanced as rapidly as post polio vaccines, although several controlled field trials have shown that post polio vaccines are both efficacious and safe. Most vaccine-related toxicity studies have been conducted on mice and monkeys. Allergenicity studies have been conducted on rabbits and guinea pigs. Post polio vaccines have been tested to determine active poliovirus excretion, tissue distribution of vaccine virus, antibody response to vaccine virus, and excretion of Toxoid and virus. These tests have been completed on several post polio vaccines. Most post polio vaccines have been tested for the ability to maintain a protective immune response to wild born in Paris in 1933 and rose to prominence as the lead violinist of the Paris Opera Orchestra. She also taught violin at the Conservatoire. Milard is one of the most successful violinists of her generation and still performs in concert with many orchestras. Amos Mouton was born in 1943 in Strasbourg, and was the first violinist in the greatest string quartet in the world, the Beethoven Quartet, where he played with the three other founding members of this quartet, violists Jean Amadieu and Christian Ferras and cellist Guy Roche. Growing up in Nice, Amos Mouton continued his musical studies at the Nice Conservatory and became a violin teacher. He is also very active in Chamber Music. The violin plays an important part in Amos Mouton's music which reflects the romantic tradition while having a modern structure. His music combines natural sounds in an excellent technique with a minimalist approach to rhythm.Optical properties and stability of
